Herring Gull
(Larus argentatus) is a large seabird weighing up to 1.5 kilograms. It possesses a ninety-centimetre wingspan, pink legs, and a yellow bill with a red spot. Highly intelligent, this omnivore lives up to thirty years, thrives along northern hemisphere coasts, and nests on cliffs and islands. Now on the UK Red List of Birds of Conservation Concern with declines stemming from overfishing, bird flu, and closed landfills, which have cut their food supply and forced them into towns.

D St Anthony Head Lighthouse
Seen from Hotel Tresanton and situated at the eastern entrance to Falmouth Harbour - guiding vessels clear of the Manacles rocks, south of the harbour entrance. The Lighthouse was built of granite by Trinity House in 1835. The small white building near the Lighthouse stored paraffin for the Lighthouses Argand Lights. The Lighthouse was electrified in 1954. The white light has a range of 16 n.miles, the red 14 n.miles. The fog signal sounds every 30 secs.

B Place House
Home to the Spry family from 1649, the site of a former piory remodelled and extended in 1840 and later, with a French Gothic facade. Also the old Mill buildings were removed and the tidal mill pool filled in to create a lawn. The central 3 storey Porte Cochère (carriage porch) has a square section spire with openings matching the Church Spire seen behind.

C St Anthony Church
In 1124 William Warlewast, Bishop of Exeter, founded a church and dedicated it to St.Anthony, the patron saint of fishermen. Sir Nikolaus Pevsner praised the church as "the best example in the county of what a parish church was like in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries."

A Place ferry
The ferry operates as a shuttle service between St Mawes Harbour and Place and is seasonal, operating between April and October (inclusive) every year. Subject to all circumstances including weather!

Common Dolphin
(Delphinus delphis) live up to 25 years and measure between 1.6 and 2.6 m in length. Females have one calf every 2 to 6 years. Adults can feed at depths of 260m for up to 8 minutes at a time.
